Anne Hillerman writes mysteries set on the Navajo Nation. Her newest Leaphorn-Chee-Manuelito novel, Shadow of the Solstice, is set for release in 2025. Rilla Askew has won many awards. Her most recent novel, Prize for the Fire, is an historical biographical novel about the Early Modern writer and martyr Anne Askew, whose connections to Queen Katheryn Parr, Henry VIII's last wife, put her own life in peril. Carolyn Brown was born in Texas and was raised in southern Oklahoma, now living in Davis. Her latest book is The Party Line.

ALA/OLA Advocacy Luncheon - The ability to advocate at the local, state, and national level is a necessary skill, but it can often seem daunting. Hear from ALA President Cindy Hohl and current OLA Advocacy Committee Chair Lisa Wells as they share successful advocacy efforts from OLA and ALA and also provide tips and tricks of how to successfully advocate for your library whether sharing about the library in the grocery store line or speaking to a legislator about the importance of library funding.

Oklahoma Literary Site Dedication for Tony Hillerman Shawnee Public Library Saturday, March 15 - 10:00 a.m.

A new Oklahoma Literary Site will honor Tony Hillerman. The dedication will be on Saturday, March 15, at the Shawnee Public Library, 101 N. Philadelphia Avenue, Shawnee. The ceremony is scheduled for 10 am and will feature Hillerman's daughter, Anne Hillerman, with Tulsa author Michael Wallis acting as Master of Ceremonies.

Tony Hillerman was born in Sacred Heart in south Pottawatomie County in 1925, attended St. Mary's Academy, graduated from Konawa High School, attended Oklahoma A & M for a semester, and then enlisted in the Army in 1943. He was honored with the Bronze Star, Silver Star, and Purple Heart for his service in the European Theater. Upon his discharge, he attended Oklahoma University, earning a B.A. in journalism, married Marie Unzner of Shawnee, and worked as a journalist in Oklahoma, Texas, and New Mexico for fifteen years, eventually earning a M.A. in journalism from the University of New Mexico. He became a faculty member there, teaching until his retirement in 1987.

Hillerman achieved fame with his Navajo police procedural series featuring characters Joe Leaphorn and Jim Chee. He published 18 novels in that series, dating from 1978 to 2006.

From the President. . .

Happy New Year! Wow – 2025! Among any New Year’s resolutions you may have, I hope you have included reading more and spending time advocating for your public library. Considering who my audience is, I probably don’t have to encourage you to read more! But let’s look at our role as advocates a little closer.

We, as Friends members, are to help promote our public libraries. Some ways we can do this are: foster growth and use of the library through association with interested community members, focus public attention on library services and needs, stimulate the gifting of books, endowments and monetary resources, and volunteer at the library and at sponsored events. Many of us do these things very well already, simply because we love our library. In 2025 let’s be more intentional in what and why we are doing these things, including others and letting them know why we think the library is so deserving of our time and resources.

Back to the topic of reading more, what book have you read recently that you just loved? Did you tell someone about it? We should be sharing the love of reading to those around us, whether they be friends, family, co-workers, or children. Often a personal recommendation can get someone reading or renew an interest in reading. Share how easy it is to get a library card, how helpful the library staff is, what a wide variety of materials are available, and best of all it’s open to anyone and doesn’t cost a thing!

So, as we go into 2025, let’s be more motivated and intentional in how we share our love for reading and especially how we promote that wonderful institution that is the public library.

Plan to attend FOLIO Day at the Oklahoma Library Association Conference on March 14 in Norman. It will be a great day of networking and learning. Early childhood literacy impacts young children’s lifelong quality of life, satisfaction with reading, and earning power. Trisha Hutcherson will suggest ways library friends can impact early childhood literacy services in their local communities. Kim Ventrella, author of middle grade novels, will share her love for infusing everyday settings with a touch of magic. Her works explore difficult topics with big doses of humor, whimsy, and hope.

FOLIO will be honoring the award winners for last year. Friends of libraries around the state are creatively supporting their local libraries throughout the year. Lunch may be on your own or you may purchase tickets for the Authors’ Luncheon or the Advocacy Luncheon. At the afternoon FOLIO Members’ Meeting, plan to share your Friends’ activities. See you there!

Angie Lewis, President

- FOLIO Splash, a statewide Friends meeting, is being planned for early October.

He published ten other titles, most notably his memoir, Seldom Disappointed (2001), and a photo guide to the Southwest, with the native stories connected to significant features, in Hillerman Country (1991). He received many awards in recognition of his literary achievements, including the Agatha Malice Domestic Award for Lifetime Achievement and the French Grand Prix de Litterature Policiere. The Navajo nation named him a “Special Friend of the Dineh” in 1987. Hillerman died in 2008.

Anne Hillerman, Tony’s daughter, has continued the Leaphorn-Chee series with nine more titles, shifting the main focus to a female Navajo officer, Bernadette Manuelito. Michael Wallis, the Master of Ceremonies, has published a number of books, most notably Route 66: The Mother Road (1990) and Pretty Boy (1992). Co-sponsors include FOLIO, the Pioneer Library System, and the Oklahoma Department of Libraries.

The Oklahoma Literary Sites recognizes deceased Oklahoma authors who have contributed to Oklahoma’s literary culture. Friends of Libraries in Oklahoma has previously recognized 15 Oklahoma authors with National Literary Landmarks®.

FOLIO Programs on March 14

Make Plans to Arrive Early

FOLIO programs are beginning at 8:30 am. You may want to arrive the night before. Embassy Suites, 2501 Conference Drive, Norman, has a special conference rate of $134, if you want to stay overnight. To book a room, call Embassy Suites (405-364-8040) or visit <https://www.hilton.com/en/hotels/okceses-embassy-suites-norman-hotel-and-conference-center/> and give the Conference rate code 93o. For questions about booking a room, contact: conference@oklibs.org

The Five Building Blocks of Early Literacy: Read, Write, Talk, Sing and Play

Trisha Hutcherson, Youth Services Consultant at the Oklahoma Department of Libraries, will share the importance and ease of incorporating these building blocks into library programming and interactions with caregivers at the 8:30 a.m. session.

Early literacy helps critical pathways form throughout a child's brain. Interacting and reading regularly with young children stimulates optimal patterns of brain development. It creates vital pathways in the brain, building language, literacy, and social-emotional skills that can bring lifelong benefits.

According to the Harvard University Center on the Developing Child, 90 percent of brain development occurs between birth and age five. As the brain develops, its neural pathways form in sequence: first, sensory pathways, then language, and finally, higher cognition levels. Don't miss this informative session!

Creating and Sustaining an Effective Friends Group

At 9:30 a.m. a panel of Friends and librarians will discuss their experiences with successful Friends groups. Quoc Vo is Board President of the Friends of the Rudisill Regional Library. They have well-attended programs, hold impressive membership drives, and advocate for the library, including a new building. Vo was a FOLIO Standout Friend in 2024.

Past President Sherry Spurrier will tell about the Friends of the Helmerich Library's active core group of members who weekly cleans withdrawn & donated books and selects children's, middle grade, young adult, and adult books for patrons to choose. FOHL members also sort the books and box them to go to storage for the annual spring book sale.

Both their spring sale and ongoing sale provide much needed funds for all the branches of Tulsa City-County Library. They give grants across the library system for Dungeons and Dragons Clubs, Discovery Lab Outreach Programs, Grow Academy, Preserving Oral Histories, and many other enjoyable and educational opportunities for all ages in the community.

Judy Haight, board member of the Friends of the Elk City Carnegie Library, will share the exciting dedication and projects of the Elk City Friends. They have sponsored inspiring author visits with children. Books for Babies provide books and library information to families with newborns. Books and food have been given to youth in the summer. This creative, active organization is involved in a wide range of activities.

Their recruitment motto is "Join the Friends of the Library and be a force for good in our community."

Leslie Durham, Library Director for Elgin Community Library, works with an active group of volunteer Friends. Corporate members are a big part of their Friends. The Friends sponsored an Enchanted Tea Party in December and held a Pop-Up Garage Sale in November. Lights and an outdoor bulletin board are a couple of the projects the Friends sponsored in 2024.

FOLIO Featured Author & Awards

Kim Ventrella is the featured author at the FOLIO Author and Awards program at 10:30 a.m. Ventrella is the author of the middle grade novels, The Secret Life of Sam, Hello Future Me, Skeleton Tree, and Bone Hollow. Her stories explore big emotions with gentleness, hope, and a little magic.

Ventrella explains her early love of libraries. "I was a socially awkward goth kid who lived in libraries whenever I could. There was one time in middle school when the Powers That Be decided to close the library during lunch. I was so upset that I wrote a front-page newspaper article and staged a protest to get the library open again. So yeah, I would say that libraries were important to me as a kid, and they played a big role in my love of reading and writing."

Scholarships and Awards for Best Friends, Hall of Fame and Friends of Libraries Week will also be presented.

2024-25 FOLIO Endowment Campaign Has Begun

The Kirkpatrick Family Fund has again agreed to grant FOLIO a match of $2,000 if we raise at least $6,000 for our annual endowment campaign. The opportunity to contribute was recently given through emails and letters.

Three generous contributions so far have allowed us to already achieve 10 per cent of our goal and we want to thank board member emeritus, Eugene Earsom, and past board members, Sharon and Jon Douthitt. The Douthitt's contribution is in honor of current board member Gerry Hendon. Also, Robert Lachance made a donation in memory of Jules and Rita Lachance. We still have a long way to go, and any amount is greatly appreciated.

Our endowment at the Oklahoma City Community Foundation has reached the point where the interest earned has allowed FOLIO to increase the budget for the annual awards and scholarships from $4,400 to $6,500. This includes funding the new Seeds for Success grants offered to Friends of Libraries groups to give books to preschoolers, particularly those living in poverty.

We encourage you to make a donation online at <http://www.okfriends.net>. You may also make a contribution directly to the Oklahoma City Community Foundation, designating FOLIO as the recipient, or send a check, with the option to honor or memorialize a special person, to Friends of Libraries in Oklahoma, P.O. Box 702585, Tulsa, OK. Your contribution is tax deductible. Thank you to all of our donors for your continued support.

Friends of Libraries Week Award

The winner of the FOLIO Friends of Libraries Week award of $500 for a Friends group in a community serving a population of over 10,000 will be awarded this year to the Friends of the Southwest Oklahoma City Library.

The award will be officially presented at the Oklahoma Library Association Conference in Norman in March in honor of their activities celebrating National Friends of Libraries week, which was October 20-26, 2024. Special programs were planned during the week. A professional organizer presented the program "Decluttering - Yes, You Can." An afternoon program demonstrated how to make "Mocktails and Book Décor." Attendees received a mocktail recipe booklet and made decorations with books.

"Books You Love" featured high schoolers (They brought their own cheer team.), a high school librarian, and community members.

All of these activities coincided with an ongoing book sale, the opportunity to take photos with the cast of "Friends" cutout, and creating individual beaded bracelets. FOL Week activities were advertised in the SOKC Friends Newsletter that was emailed to members and at the Library.

Congratulations, Friends of the Southwest Oklahoma City Library, for a job well done!

Linda Pye, FOL Week Committee Chair

The Craft Market was held indoors and outdoors. Below are book crafters.

Libraries and Well-Being

A recently released study by the New York Public Library found that patrons feel that the Library positively contributes to their well-being.

1. Library spaces, services, and materials provide a sense of stability, safety, refuge, and peace, and allow them to escape and focus.
2. Library usage generates positive emotions and promotes engagement through discovery, enrichment, & inspiration.
3. Library usage supports their growth and expansion.
4. The positive impact of libraries on well-being is highest for patrons living in lower income communities.
5. Patrons who spent time in the Library's spaces and attended programs reported consistently higher impact than e-only users.
6. Public libraries support the flourishing of their patrons - and thereby help strengthen their communities.

Findings included:

- 88% of respondents said the Library supported them in their personal growth.
- The Library's resources supported patrons in their creative pursuits (80%), schoolwork (73%), & work or career (72%).

Pryor Friends Are Everywhere

The Friends of Pryor Creek Library (FOPCL) have had a busy and productive 2024. Our outreach to the community included a booth at the Mayes County Family Fun in the Sun Day, sponsored by the County Health Department, to share library resources, programming, and the information about Dolly Parton's Imagination

Library, the major project of FOPCL. We had contact with over 100 people and felt good about the connections we made with the community. Pictured are l to r: Jeanette Anderson, Susan Rice, FOPCL Board Members, Cari Rerat, Library Director.

Another highlight of our year was the Local Author Roundup, where we sold tables to local authors as a fundraiser. The authors were able to sell their books and make connections with readers and other writers who are active in northeast Oklahoma. Since this activity was well received by the community, we will try again, expanding our offerings.

Pryor Public Library and FOPCL also maintain a presence at Pryor's annual ComicCon event, where we distribute information about the library, sponsor a Scavenger Hunt with small prizes for completion, and dress appropriately to support the theme.

To promote civic engagement, FOPCL sponsored a well attended local Political Forum at the library. We provided and collected questions from the audience for the candidates and served as a timer for candidate answers.

For 2025, the Gatsby's Gala Mystery Night at the American Legion Hall in Pryor is planned on January 25, to raise funds for our portion of the Dolly Parton Imagination Library program that provides books for children in Mayes County from 0-5 years to promote literacy. Over 9,452 books were provided to children in 2024. Find info and details at: <https://www.facebook.com/events/1233464974376654>

Hope to see you there!

Season's Readings at Duncan

On December 3rd, the Friends of the Duncan Public Library celebrated the 2nd annual Lighting of the Library with their Season's Readings lighted displays. Friends members and library supporters came out to enjoy cookies and hot chocolate, Christmas music, lots of crafting and coloring, and a presentation about all the things the Friends have done for the Library this year.

Then we had our countdown to the lighting! The Friends sold shirts and ornaments with "Season's Readings at DPL" emblazoned on them and officially began the fundraiser for the newest big project they're undertaking. The Friends applied for and received a matching grant from the McCasland Foundation to remodel the board room and kitchen in the library so that we can offer more event space and more educational programming. The library will get new flooring, new paint, new lighting, new furniture, new appliances, cabinet refurbishing, and more! They have raised over half of the money required to match the grant so far and are planning the next fundraiser right now.

Q - Friends of libraries are challenged with what to do with books that don't sell. An online discussion among friends of libraries across the nation included these suggestions.

Several friends groups suggested sending books to national or local second-hand sellers. Friends reported using remainder wholesalers like: Thrift Books, BookOff, used musical venue taking CDs, BombBooks, BooksRun, World of Books, Sustainable Shelves, and Better World Books.

Some friends groups give away the books that have not sold or don't meet their sales criteria. Locations they reported include local Food Bank, Little Free Libraries, community centers, day care centers, housing projects, nonprofit groups, Headstart programs, nursing homes/ assisted living centers, housing shelters, Veterans' Hospital, youth centers, after-school tutoring, GED

One friends' group reported having Book Art programs, using remainder books and giving them to agencies with craft programs.

Free days for their "book sales" helps one Friends group reduce inventory, or they sell by the grocery bag for $5.

Some options are more work, but alternatives make connections in your community, save the landfill, and help get books into readers' hands.

Crafting with Books

FOLIO has a free PowerPoint presentation that FOLIO members may use, adapt, add to, etc. for craft programs. Projects include crazy things like book planters and book lamps to origami and book sculptures.

This is just meant as a jumping off point to spur your imagination and creativity with paper crafts, decoupage, framed art, and other book décor.

Your library will have many books on crafting with books and, of course, the internet is full of other ideas. Harthorne Public Library held "Creating Snow People" from old books in January. This is a way that Friends may use some of the books that will not sell. Email newsletter@okfriends.net to receive a copy of the slides.

programs, correctional facilities, Goodwill, health clinics, hospital wards, foster care agencies, summer camps, and cancer centers.

Four Banned Books events were held last year in which one Friends group gave books to children and teens.

One Friends group reported using Bookteriors vendor in Charleston, NC. to upcycle books. They take used books and refurbish them for sale to high-scale homes and people who are more interested in impressing others than reading the books they buy. While there's not profit in it, they dispose of unwanted books in an environmentally smarter manner.

A local not-for-profit second-hand book store takes all of the books from one Friends group. All the money they earn goes into literacy programs they run.

Some Oklahoma friends of libraries groups go the second mile in trying to sell books by taking books to local festivals and having booths at the local antique mall.

What about having a book shelf at a local coffee shop or café? Making it a convenient, point-of-purchase sale will encourage guests to relax and enjoy the benefits of reading.

Meet Me at the Library

Shamichael Hallman, Director of Civic Health and Economic Opportunity at Urban Libraries Council, is the author of the new book, Meet Me at the Library: A Place to Foster Social Connection and Promote Democracy (Island Press, 2024), which examines the role of public libraries as an antidote to the growing loneliness, isolation, and mistrust in America.

Hallman believes that libraries are spaces where people can come together, bridge differences of race, income and belief, and engage with each other and the community in ways that support better health, greater happiness, and even a healthy democracy. "Researchers have found that disconnection, social isolation and loneliness are compounded by the alienating effects of technology, social media and a decades-long loss of the civic organizations and clubs that once bound us together."

"Libraries are a big part of civic renewal, because they serve the community in multiple ways," says Hallman. "If you think about their core functions, you will see they empower citizens, bring communities together, renew civic life, build shared knowledge, foster understanding, and create unique partnerships. In short, libraries are a trusted springboard for collective action."

The US Surgeon General explicitly names libraries as part of the social infrastructure poised to make a difference in addressing the loneliness epidemic in a 2023 report. Libraries have expanded their roles as trusted community places with free health literacy support. Social prescribing, a new trend in health care, gives libraries another opportunity to make a difference in the lives of their customers.

Local doctors should be informed about the services and opportunities for their patients at the library. Many libraries are already doing so many things that could improve mental and physical well-being including:

- Assisting in navigating government programs and nonprofit resources
- Offering health activities
- Hosting grief and healing activities
- Supporting arts and culture
- Celebrating nature with park passes, access to zoos
- Strengthening community and connection building with book clubs, mom's groups, teen action groups, volunteer opportunities, sewing clubs
- Providing meeting space, study rooms, and a library card for access to books and digital resources
